The 2006 race for Mayor of the District of Columbia is in full swing. Issues abound--- Development pressure on our neighborhoods. Schools that aren't delivering quality education. Lack of affordable housing. Controversial stadium funding. Political appointments that don't reflect community interests. Take-it-or-leave-it city planning. Growing traffic, parking and safety problems. Emergency response failures. Inadequate street and tree maintenance.

These and other questions on local and citywide issues will be put to the candidates by representatives of the citizens associations, the moderator and the audience.
